/2.5.12.1a by Bina Bhargava from the Bengali source. Download 2.5.12.2 - Bhanu - Banyan Tree - (D.R.O.) On a large field of banyan in front of Raja's home A woman walks. A woman walks. As she walks, the sound of thunder fills the air. There is a deep voice talking to the woman with the banyan. The lady is in deep distress with fear and distress. A deep voice tells her that she should go and get what she needs (of course she leaves). As she runs down the field, she gets closer to her house and sees the house standing on banyan. She hears that a woman is sleeping and she runs to her (her house). Seeing her, her eyes shine. He awakes, shouts: "Why did you leave without help, what did you do? No one helped you! There is no food, there is no water, what can you do, no one will help you! Oh, what am I? What am I? Where am I? Oh, how could I be dead if I cannot help? The God of creation has come down to your house. If you do not give me, I will eat your soul, and then you too will become a dead man." His words are heard in the house and in the valley. Soon after. A banyan tree is planted near that place. A woman calls for her boy by name. She is accompanied by a few men. When she gets back home she sees that her house is almost entirely devoid of the family life. One man does not want her and starts screaming. It is then that she looks into the eyes of the man and realizes who the man wants her to marry. The woman gives up saying that she will no more stay and wait for him. She goes out to meet those who are already there to help her with her problems until she becomes a mother like the one who was with the woman and has given birth to her. All of them are crying and looking up for her only to see her crying in anguish when she has made her way out of the place without help. She gets back home. When they see her, they start to cry for her and start to shout for her to come back home with them. They all cry, saying something like: "We cannot help her, if she has no friends, we won't help her." It 3rd Party.
